Laugh A Lot

Great Success

By no stretch of the imagination could you call her beautiful. You could say she was a very pleasant girl with a heart of gold. And leave it at that. Her grandmother had been a famous singer. She wanted to follow in her footsteps. Her music teacher was an honest man. He thought it a crime to take her money so he tried his best to hint that there were other fields for her talents. She simply told him she would be a success. And it seemed as though she believed it.

That Saturday night they had a charity affair The home talent performed.

"You want her on the program to sing?" challenged the director.

"If you don't take her," said her music teacher, "the rest will not sing. Give her a chance. Call it charity if you wish "

"HE will be there," sighed the director "I hope she doesn't ruin it for others."

HE was there that evening. He owned several record companies in Latin America. And he came right to the point when he spoke to her.

"I have written a special song. You must know Spanish. I will give you $300.00 a week while you learn Spanish. Then guarantee you $10,000 for that one record."

She studied Spanish. Went below the border with her parents. Made the record. It was in Spanish what you call "gran exito" – great success. She eventually married him. But what she sang in Spanish was a constant repetition of only one note on the scale: La. The song? The famous "La-la-la-la" Song. Ten million records sold!

Everyone in her school liked her very much Each term she was the class president by a 100% vote. She always was able to raise money for any charity. She took attendance in the class and collected the homework faithfully. Definitely, at her graduation she was going to be voted the best liked girl.

But alas, no human being, is perfect. And she had only one fault. Big or small, depending upon your viewpoint: She rarely came to school on time. Her excuses would fill a book: The bus just left as she came to the corner, the milkman delivered the milk too late; she had to get the newspaper for her father; or the alarm clock did not ring on time.

The Dean sent for her parents. They were willing to cooperate to get her to school on time. In fact they did all they could to see she left home before 8:10. Yet she came late. Then the Dean sent for her.

"Just for once," he pleaded. "I dare you to get here on time. This is Friday. Don't exert yourself over the week end. But get here on time!"

That she faithfully promised to do Sunday her parents told her the news: "We have to leave and won't be back until Thursday. Your aunt is very ill. You know how to take care of the house."

She set the alarm for 6.30 It didn't ring and she got up from a deep sleep Dressed, made breakfast, and went to school. Saw the Dean and said to him. "You have no complaint to make this time. I am early."

"Right," he admitted, "But where were you Monday and Tuesday? This is Wednesday."

Parakeets

For many years our favorite household pet was a very beautiful parakeet. We would entertain our guests by having the bird repeat sentences which we had taught to him.

"Is there such a thing as a parakeet that sings?" asked one of my friends. "I have an old favorite aunt who lives by herself. Would make a nice present to her."

So I sent my friend to the store where I had purchased my parakeet. My friend became a bit more explicit in the store as he spoke to the owner.

"When my aunt was young she sang in the local opera company So you have a parakeet that can sing Tosca in Italian?"

The manager went to the back of the store and returned with a very beautiful parakeet in a cage.

"Listen to this genius of the bird world sing," he said.

And for fully five minutes the bird did a wonderful job. So my friend said to the manager: "I'll take the parakeet. How much?"

"$150.00 in cash only," was the reply.

My friend gave him the cash which the man took. Then he put two small cages on the table.

"You really also need these two parakeets," he said. "Only $25.00 each."

"Why?" demanded my friend

"Because one is the arranger and the other is the impressario "

So my friend bought those two And just as he left the store, the manager gave him a present of a parakeet.

"I can't cheat you," he sighed. "This parakeet is the ventriloquist who did the singing you heard."

I'LL OPEN FOR TWO!
I'LL CALL
ME, TOO!
THIS WAY, GIRLS... I BELIEVE MY DAISY IS ALMOST AT THE END OF THE TRAIL!
SNIFF!
SHE TRACKED OUR HUSBANDS HERE! THEY'RE PLAYING CARDS IN FRED'S GARAGE! I CAN HEAR THEM!
IT'S OUR WIVES, BOYS! AND THEY'VE GOT FIRE IN THEIR EYES!
LET'S GET 'EM!
OPEN THE DOOR THIS INSTANT!
WE KNOW YOU'RE IN THERE!
